Chenango County Health Department asks residents to comply with contact tracing

By ZACHARY MESECK
GAZETTE STAFF WRITER

CHENANGO COUNTY – As cases vary throughout Chenango County, health department officials ask that residents answer contact tracer calls and await reports from their office before calling.

According to Chenango County Public Health Director of Environmental Health and Code Enforcement Isaiah Sutton, the health department is fighting an uphill battle with the growing number of COVID-19 cases.

Sutton said as cases come in, the nursing division and tracer team have their hands full with filing reports and reaching out to individuals with potential coronavirus exposure.

"The first thing is, we will contact all positive patients that we receive reports for, but reports can sometimes take a couple days to reach our office," said Sutton. "In a very small number of cases, cases are sent somewhere else due to typos or errors, and it takes longer to reach us."

"Sometimes in these cases people will call the office and ask why they weren't contacted first, but we'd ask that individuals give us a couple of days to reach out first before calling in."

He said individuals calling in before a report has been processed slows down tracers, as they could be contacting individuals whose reports are finished. He added that another issue facing the tracer and nursing teams is individuals not answering phone calls.

"We really want folks to answer 518 numbers, public health, or contact tracer calls which should be displayed right on the caller ID," said Sutton. "The sooner someone knows their potential risk of having been exposed, we can limit them from exposing others."

"We have enough individuals who aren't responding quickly to tracer calls where it is an issue."

He said folks who require five or six phone calls before first contact are taking up a large portion of the tracer's time.

Sutton said if someone believes that they have had a direct contact with someone who was exposed, they should quarantine for 10 days and await a report from tracers.

Sutton added that the people who understand these points will help slow the spread of the virus and decrease the strain on a tracer's workload.

"Our nursing division is working seven days a week to keep people safe and informed," he said.

He added that the Chenango County Nursing Division has released a number of tips that will help slow disease transmission, calm some individual fears, and ease some undue burden on our contact tracing team.

The nursing division said as case numbers continue to rise, they would like to provide some information that anyone who is exhibiting symptoms of COVID-19 is asked to immediately self-isolate and be tested.

Testing sites near you may be found at ny.gov.

Anyone who is tested because they are symptomatic must self-isolate until test results are returned.

If a person tests positive, even if asymptomatic, they must continue or immediately begin self-isolation.

Nursing division representatives said their office does not receive results in real time and due to the surge in cases it may be 24-48 hours before you hear from our team. If it has been over 48hrs since you received your results and you have not been contacted please call 607-337-1660.

If you were not identified by the positive individual as a contact or if you have not had direct contact when the positive case was symptomatic, then you may not be contacted.

Chobani thanks local community during holiday season

NORWICH – In continued appreciation of its hometown, especially during this challenging year, Chobani hosted its 6th Annual Community Giveaway at the Chenango County Fairgrounds on Dec. 5.

The drive-thru-only event requested all attendees wear masks and handed out free yogurt to hundreds of residents.

“For the past six years, Chobani has sought to thank the local community we call home by handing out free cases of yogurt at the end of the Parade of Lights in Norwich. However this year, due to the COVID-19 pandemic, the Parade of Lights was cancelled,” Chobani Community Engagement Manager Don Brown explained.

“We decided to instead to provide a safe and socially distanced environment by creating a drive-thru event at the Fairgrounds. The goal was to share our delicious and nutritious foods with our neighbors, thanking them for their support and adhering to our mission to provide better food for more people.”

More than 15 volunteers from Chobani worked at the event, setting up, unloading yogurt and assisting with traffic flow. More than 500 vehicles stopped at the Chobani trailer during the two hour event.

“With all the area events cancelled or virtual this year, we felt the need to share with the community was greater than ever this year,” said Brown.

Throughout the country, Chobani has donated nearly seven million products to help those in need, providing free food to food banks, hospitals, schools, and shelters.

“But we always want to support the communities we call home – including the greater Central New York region where we started our journey. Giving back is part of the Chobani way, and we were thrilled to continue our yearly tradition of donating products during the holiday season in a manner that was safe for all to enjoy,” said Brown.

Chobani thanked the community for the support. “We want to thank Mary Weidman at the Chenango County Fairgrounds, Isaiah Sutton at the Chenango County Health Department and Deputy Chief Scott Burlison of the Norwich Police Department in particular for all of their wonderful support in helping making this event a reality,” said Brown.

North Norwich supervisor resigns citing board strife as cause

NORTH NORWICH – The Town of North Norwich’s supervisor turned in his resignation letter earlier this month, and said a lack of cohesion and lackluster productivity from local government officials were some of the main reasons why he resigned.

According to North Norwich Supervisor Timothy Brown, Thursday December 31 will be his last day working as supervisor. Brown is resigning his post after differences with the town board and officials in the town highway department.

“I went into this with great hopes of making things better for the town’s people, and now I know what’s going on but I can’t fix it,” said Brown. “We didn’t know COVID was coming, but we knew they were spending like wildfire, and that is still a problem.”

Brown said he entered the election to try and make changes that would bring more business to the Town of Norwich and help improve the quality of life for residents there.

He said the board got a lot accomplished in the year he served as supervisor, including the creation of a park committee, a balanced budget, a new website, and the installation of a security system using grant funding.

He added that the lack of cohesion in local government made getting more done stressful, and at times there appeared to be a lack of interest in the change from parts of the community.

“If people aren’t upset enough to come to meetings to gripe, then what’s the point,” asked Brown. “Unless everyone is on the same page, it’s never going to move forward.”

“They’ve gotten 11 years out of me, and after this first year I decided that I’m good.”

Brown thanked everyone who helped him throughout the election, and said he “hopes he didn’t let anyone down.”

According to Town of North Norwich Clerk Loretta Smith, it’s not overly uncommon to have a supervisor quit during a term, and the question for the board is, “who will fill that void?”

Smith said by next Tuesday, January 5 the board will have to decide if they will appoint a new supervisor or if the deputy supervisor will take over. She said if the deputy supervisor did cover the position North Norwich would lose its representation in the county’s board of supervisors.

“I would think that it’s in the town’s best interest to appoint a supervisor so we have that representation,” said Smith. “It’s important for continuity for the decision to be made on Tuesday night so we can get back on track as quickly as possible.”

“Unfortunately we can’t do it sooner because we can’t fill the position until there’s a vacancy.”

She said the meeting will be held at 6:30 p.m. on January 5 at the Town Hall. She added that the meeting does have limited seating due to coronavirus regulations.

Chenango County invests $200,000 in response to recent ransomware attack

By ZACHARY MESECK
GAZETTE STAFF WRITER

C H E N A N G O COUNTY – The Chenango County Board of Supervisors recently approved $200,000 to cover the costs of new software after the county's computers were affected by a ransomware attack.

Chenango County Clerk of the Board RC Woodford said the cyber attack happened on October 18, and while the attackers were requesting approximately $90,000, paying the ransom wasn't an option.

Woodford said the $200,000 basically covers software upgrades including new Windows 365 software for all 400 of the county's computers along with some equipment upgrades. He said the annual cost wouldn't likely be that high.

"After the attack essentially everything was taken offline, servers were scrubbed, and the machines were restored to a usable form," said Woodford. "We wanted to make sure something like this would never happen again, so immediately after the attack we got a rough estimate together of what it would cost to make sure this isn't a repeat issue."

He said licensing requirements that require annual subscriptions will cause this to be an ongoing budget concern, and that some of the $200,000 budget line will be turned into operating costs in the future to keep the computers licensed.

At the November Chenango County Board of Supervisors meeting, Woodford stated he did not know if they would see six figures costs each year due to the upgrades, but there would be an incremental increase versus what they had purchased in the past. He said licenses used to be good for the life of the computer, but now software developers charge annually.

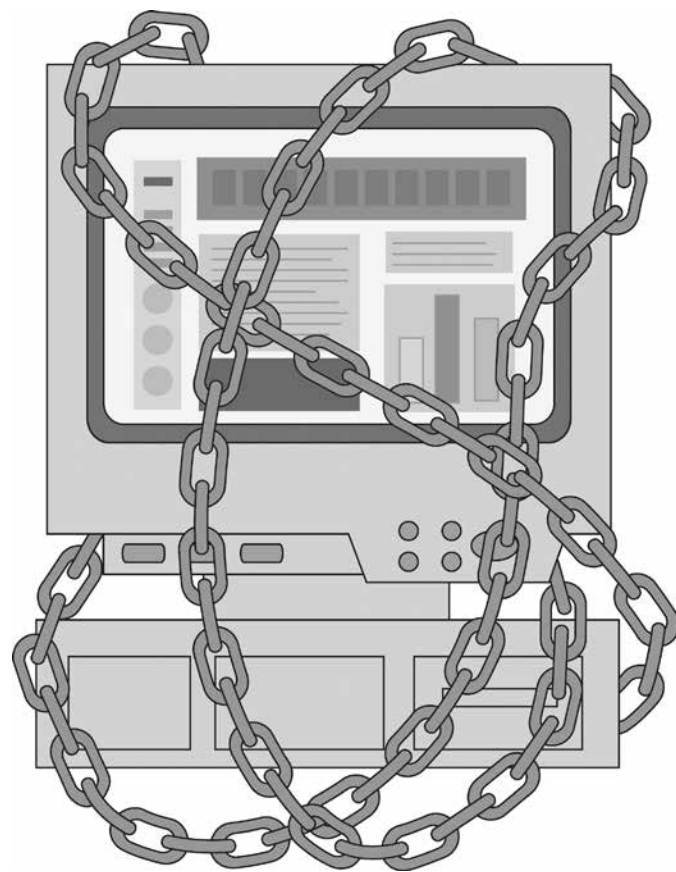

He added that the annual renewal fee never seemed to go down, and that the cost would probably be in the ten of thousands range with having close to 400 PCs.

Chenango County Director of Information Technology Herman Ericksen previously spoke on the ransomware attack explaining that attackers encrypted county files and asked for a ransom to be paid to unlock them.

He said the program requested $450 for each infected machine. He estimated the county operated about 400 computers and at least half of them were impacted.

He added that the county's top priorities in the wake of the cyber attack was to restore affected systems involving key technology infrastructure, election systems and payroll.

Woodford said the attack left computers down for maintenance for weeks, with the majority of the computers back online in late November.

Keep Calm and Kerri On: Benjamin Franklin and The Flintstones

KERRI GREEN
Evening Sun
Columnist

Dear Friends,

I've been doing a little research on the history of electricity. We often think of Benjamin Franklin discovering electricity with a kite, a key and some lightning. While this is often how we think of it, the history of electricity goes back as far as 500 B.C. Doctors and scientists dabbled with the theory of electricity throughout our history. In the early 1700's there was an English scientist that made a glass ball glow while experimenting and created enough light to read in the dark. Fast forward to 1751 when Benjamin Franklin published his findings "Experiments and Observations on Electricity". We could say the rest is history, but it wasn't until 1882 when the first home in the United States was set up with what we would consider residential electricity. By 1960 nearly every home in the United States had electricity. Crazy, right? I was fascinated by these facts, which I found on mrelectric.com if you want to check it out. So, why was I researching electricity? Seems like an odd thing for someone like me to do I know. I was interested in seeing how long it took to develop, from the idea of electricity to actual implementation and practical usage. I wondered how we could take some of the concepts and practices for the development of electricity and how we can correlate that to broadband service as a utility.

In the early days of electricity use in homes, blocks of wood were used for panels, switches and fuse boxes. No wonder fires were so common! Do you remember the early days of getting online? Dial-up. Whoa! Blast from the past right? Dial-up. First you hear the number dial ... then a brief pause ... then the sound like a fax machine makes, then lots of static and bam! You're online. My kids today have no idea how tedious and unreliable the process of getting online used to be. Getting bumped off, retrying over and over if too many people were online ... what a nightmare! And now? You are always connected, always online, never have to login or worry about too many people getting on at the same time. Our phones, televisions, computers, homes, cars ... everything is always connected!

Our issues today are more about access to internet and quality. When I look back to the history of electricity and the infrastructure we have today, it's amazing what we take for granted. Dark out? Flip the switch. Need to make a call? Pick up your cell and make it. Want to search what other movies that actor or actress was in? Grab your device and search it! We have unlimited information literally at our fingertips. Well, not all of us do.

Unfortunately, nearly half of those who live and work in Chenango County face a big problem. In August of 2020, a study from Congressman Brindisi's office was released and noted some of the glaring issues throughout NY22 regarding broadband access, cost and reliability of the service. One of the biggest discrepancies was that the FCC inaccurately claims that 76.8% of Chenango County residents and businesses have access to broadband. However, a similar report put out by Microsoft shows that only 26% of Chenango County have access. This is such a huge difference and even if we feel like it's probably in the middle of each, we can safely guess that about half of Chenango County has access to broadband. And out of those that have it, most have issues with reliability, speed and cost.

One of the biggest issues facing us is availability of broadband. It cripples our businesses; it makes us uncompetitive when trying to attract any business or person to relocate here; and this doesn't even touch on the issues facing our students and educators with this lack of access. To me, solving this problem will make all the difference in our economic development initiatives. Helping to solve this broadband puzzle in Chenango County is a top priority of my office.

Broadband is a necessary part of infrastructure that should be available to everyone, everywhere, no matter what. Just like electricity is. It's necessary to our future and without it, we have to work that much harder to be competitive. Just like we worked hard as a nation to provide electricity to every home in the United States, we are faced with the same need once again and this time it's broadband. I just can't believe that we are over 20 years into the "dot com" transformation, and we still haven't figured this out yet.

While we wait for those higher up to finally make the investments necessary, Commerce Chenango and our affiliated organizations are not waiting around. We're taking action in many ways. We were integral in developing the Southern Tier 8 Regional Broadband Coalition where we are working on updated maps, education and planning so we can apply for funds to build out the infrastructure. We have teamed up with new and innovative companies that have technology that is affordable and reliable to do this now. In addition, we will be submitting a grant later this week. If we are successful, we'll get the money needed to build out two underserved communities in Chenango County with broadband. In addition, once we show how we were successful with this first program, we will be able to get additional funds to continue this work throughout the rest of the county. If we have to slowly outfit each community, one grant at a time, we will make this happen. Chenango County has waited long enough, and we can't afford to be crippled by this lack of basic infrastructure.

Just know that you have a dedicated group of people working on this together. We are determined to make this happen, and we are using every tool and resource we have to find a way to fund this initiative.

Hey, if The Flintstones can figure out how to use dinosaurs and animals to outfit their kitchen appliances, this broadband thing should be a snap!

Yabba Dabba Doo, Chenango!

Give Ice Fishing a Try

show you the ropes and give you some insight to shorten the learning curve. Consider looking at online forums or social media pages. If you do not have any luck finding a mentor, approach other people who are out fishing when you are and try to talk to them. Do not expect them to tell you where their honey hole is but, ask questions about what equipment they are using or if the fish are shallow or deep.

Dress for the weather, pay attention to the wind forecast to know if you should bring head/face coverings. Keeping your feet warm is critical since you are literally standing on a giant ice block the entire time. Wool socks and well insulated boots can keep the ice from sapping the heat from your feet. You can also bring a small foam mat to put down as a layer of insulation between the ice and your feet. Wear your clothes in layers, with either wool or polyester clothing as the layer closest to your skin. Wool keeps its insulative properties if it gets wet from sweat and polyester wicks moisture away from the skin. Avoid cotton clothing for base layers. Layered clothing helps in case you move around the lake throughout your trip so you can shed layers when you get warm and then put clothing back on as you cool down.

Pack some food and drinks with you. In the cold temperatures, your body metabolism increases to burn calories to stay warm. In turn, you need to supply your body with more calories so that it can keep running. There seems to be something magical about drinking coffee or hot chocolate from a Thermos as its warm fills your stomach and the heat spreads throughout your body. When fishing with a group, bring a portable stove and cook food. Cooking breakfast sausage and then frying eggs in the leftover grease in the pan is one of my favorite ice fishing meals.

In terms of gear, the most basic equipment list is ice auger, ice scoop, bucket (which is flipped over and used as a seat), and ice fishing rod. Hand augers can be bought for under $100 and their blades can last for numerous seasons before needing to be resharpened or replaced. If focused more on catching panfish, an 18" light or ultralight action jigging rod is ideal. Spool the reel with brightly colored line so that it is easier to see light movement in the line when a soft biting fish is trying to eat the jig. A sled is also handy for carrying your gear, so your hands are free. Having a small selection of jigs in different colors allows you to try different ones until you find one that the fish like. Tipping the jig with live bait, such as spikes or waxworms, is common when ice fishing as it adds better smell and action to the jig.

Fishing with tipups can be another good way to get introduced to ice fishing. A tipup is a reel setup so that when a fish bites and swims off with the bait, a flag raises up to tell you a fish is on. Generally, tipups work best for the more predatory species and are baited with live minnows or shiners. The drawback to tipups is that they can be expensive to purchase a set of 5 or more plus they must have the fisherman's name and address labelled on them. However, sitting around talking while waiting for flags to go up can make the time pass easier than being isolated in a shanty.

So, if you find yourself bored or just looking for a new winter activity to try, consider giving ice fishing a try. It allows you to get outside to get fresh air while also giving you a chance to put food on the table if you want.

M&T Bank donates $41,200 to Southern Tier food banks

Grant funding for local food banks and hunger-relief organizations will help stock the shelves of pantries in households throughout the region.

BINGHAMTON – M&T Bank today announced $41,200 in grant funding to 12 local nonprofit organizations that are fighting food insecurity in the Southern Tier.

M&T Bank representatives said the company is a longtime supporter of the region's food banks, nutrition programs, and hunger-relief charities. The effort to combat hunger has additional significance with the pandemic taking a severe toll on the economy, creating greater need for food assistance throughout the community.

"We have a responsibility to look after our most vulnerable neighbors. During what has been an exceptionally difficult year, these 12 nonprofits have been putting food on tables, sustaining nutrition for children and seniors, and bringing dignity to those facing hardships," said M&T Bank Regional President Peter Newman. "This contribution helps our local food pantries in that mission, which will bring some measure of relief this holiday season."

The following nonprofit organizations received donations from M&T Bank: Catholic Charities of Chenango County, Binghamton University Food Pantry, Broome County Council of Churches, Catholic Charities of Broome County, Cortland County Area Agency on Aging, Food Bank of The Southern Tier, Loaves & Fishes of Tompkins County, Meals on Wheels of Western Broome, Meals on Wheels of Chemung County, Nutrition for the Elderly in Tompkins County, Inc., T.A.C.O. Food Pantry, Tioga County Rural Ministry people suffered from food insecurity, representing around 11.7 percent of the population, according to the latest data available from Feeding America. Those numbers were expected to rise due to COVID-19's effects on lives and livelihoods, with projected rates as high as 16.8 percent in Broome County and 16.4 percent in Chemung County.

In the Southern Tier, approximately 64,040

Over the last 25 years, M&T has invested more than $12.5 million to support thousands of charitable organizations in the region.

Operating as a community bank, M&T Bank awards and disburses donations through local teams who live and work in their respective regions. M&T Bank maintains a regional headquarters — providing management and support for 10 counties in New York's Southern Tier and Pennsylvania's Bradford County — on Exchange Street in downtown Binghamton.

SUDOKU

Fun By The Numbers
Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Chobani Appoints CNN correspondent Cristina Alesci as chief corporate affairs officer

NORWICH – Chobani announced that veteran CNN and Bloomberg Television correspondent Cristina Alesci will serve as Chief Corporate Affairs Officer, starting today.

Alesci will report to Chobani President & COO Peter McGuinness in her new role, leading external and internal communications, government and community relations, social impact and philanthropy. Alesci will also join Chobani's Executive Leadership team.

"From our humble yogurt beginnings in upstate New York through our evolution and expansion into a modern food company, Chobani uses food as a force for good and helps drive positive change in communities across the country," said McGuinness. "It's important for our brand to authentically tell and share the stories that shape our values, beliefs and business. Cristina brings over a decade of storytelling for CNN and Bloomberg TV to Chobani, highlighting our continued growth and innovation while challenging businesses and society to think and act differently, always putting humanity first."

Chobani created the CCAO role for Alesci as Chobani ends 2020 with double-digit growth across its oat milk, creamers, functional wellness drinks and yogurt businesses in grocery outlets and online. Throughout the year, the company has successfully launched products in four new categories, adding an oat milk platform, plant based and dairy creamers, and oat-based functional probiotic drinks, while investing in communities and donating more than 7 million products to food banks coast-to-coast. Chobani has also supported its workforce throughout the challenges of the global COVID-19 pandemic, providing special benefits to its essential workers like quarterly bonuses and daily childcare stipends, while keeping plants in New York and Idaho operating uninterrupted, 24/7. In October, Chobani announced a commitment to a starting wage of $15 an hour, more than double the federal minimum wage. This investment brings the average wage for Chobani's essential workers to $19 an hour.

Alesci joins Chobani from CNN, where she was a business and political correspondent since 2014. Known for her in-depth coverage of financial markets and government policies, Alesci has appeared regularly on Anderson Cooper 360, The Lead with Jake Tapper, The Situation Room with Wolf Blitzer, Erin Burnett's Out Front and Newsroom. Alesci has delivered original reporting and analysis on breaking financial and economic news and trends, including U.S. public companies' response to COVID-19, the Black Lives Matter movement and White House economic, trade and social policies. She has interviewed many of the country's leading politicians and business executives, including Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin, J.P. Morgan Chase & Co CEO Jamie Dimon, Starbucks Corporation founder and former CEO Howard Schultz, and Chobani's founder and CEO Hamdi Ulukaya for a 2015 CNN story about the company's policy of employing refugees.

"As the daughter of two immigrant parents who sacrificed dearly to give their children a better life, I have a special place in my heart for those who use their platform and success to make the promise of America brighter than it was yesterday," said Alesci. "Chobani is that kind of modern company — and that's why I'm joining. I'm looking forward to helping Hamdi, Peter and Chobani's incredibly passionate team continue to grow and build the next generation food company, one that makes food nutritious, delicious and affordable for all, while helping change the world."

Prior to her work at CNN, Alesci worked as a print and on-air reporter for five years at Bloomberg Television, covering the aftermath of the financial crisis and breaking news on some of the biggest business and private equity deals that followed. Alesci received a M.A. in Journalism with honors from The City University of New York's Craig Newmark Graduate School of Journalism, a B.S. in Criminal Justice magna cum laude from Pace University, and a post-baccalaureate certificate in business from Columbia University. Alesci serves as a director and treasurer of the board of the Craig Newmark Graduate School of Journalism at CUNY and volunteers as an advocate for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation, hosting many of its major fundraising events and raising awareness about Type 1 Diabetes.

Last week, Chobani announced veteran finance executive Jody Macedonio would join the company to serve as Chief Financial Officer, an appointment that was also effective on Dec. 28. Like Alesci, Macedonio will report to McGuinness and be a member of Chobani's Executive Leadership team.

YMCA announces its annual support campaign leaders

By ZACHARY MESECK
GAZETTE STAFF WRITER

NORWICH – The Norwich Family YMCA has announced the chairpersons for its annual support campaign, and is now attempting to raise thousands of dollars to support low income families and individuals.

According to Norwich Family YMCA Jamey Mullen, Kurt Edwards and Mary Carol Edwards have agreed to be this year's chairpersons for the YMCA Support Campaign along with honorary chairpersons Jim and Virginia Edwards.

To support this year's campaign, an online gift can be made at this link: <https://norwichymca.wixsite.com/opendoors> or a donation card can be completed to support the 2020-2021 Open Doors Annual Campaign.

"The Norwich YMCA is a charitable Not-for-Profit organization that relies on membership and program revenue along with charitable donations to support the Greater Norwich and Chenango County areas with programs and services to meet a diverse membership base and community need," said Mullen. "Each year the YMCA raises thousands of dollars to support the many families and individuals with membership and program support."

"This year has been challenging for the YMCA and families across the county, as we maneuver through the diverse needs of childcare and a safe and operable facility for all."

Mullen said that he hopes the community can support the call for help and donate to this year's campaign.

"We all seem to have a YMCA story or memory and our chairpersons, the Edwards, are no different," he said. "The ultimate goal is to provide and promote many more memories ahead for everyone, no matter one's ability, socio-economic background, race, religion, or gender."

"We want to make sure the Y is here for everyone."

In a group written and signed letter, the Edwards discussed their support for the Y and their history with the organization.

"It is a privilege and an honor for Mary Carol and me to Co-Chair the Annual Support Campaign with my parents Jim and Virginia," said the Edwards in the letter. "Our family has a long history as members, and we all have benefited from many of the programs that the YMCA has to offer."

They said what makes the Norwich Family YMCA extraordinary is its amazing staff and dedicated volunteers that passionately support the values of youth development, healthy living and social responsibility.

They added that The Norwich Family YMCA believes that everyone, regardless of age, income or background deserves the opportunity to learn, grow and thrive.

"That's why the Open Doors Scholarship program was started many years ago to help the Y provide important programs and services to people who might not have the financial means to take advantage of them," said the Edwards. "Over the years thousands of families and children have been provided financial assistance for childcare, membership, youth sports and other activities."

"The need for financial assistance today is greater than ever. Please consider a meaningful gift to the Annual Scholarship Campaign and join us in supporting our local Norwich Family YMCA."

SPCA animals need a loving home

Left, Esme is a female domestic shorthair cat currently looking for a home. She is a small cat and is about a year and seven months old. She has lived at the shelter since being found as a kitten and was likely only a few weeks old at the time. She is sweet and playful and loves cat treats.

Right, Kennedy is a black juvenile male cat. He is also a smaller-sized cat and estimated to be about a year and four months old. Kennedy arrived at the SPCA almost feral but has adapted well since. He is a little shy, but very lovable.

Please help us find these wonderful animals a new home, contact the Chenango County SPCA at 607-334-9724 if you have questions. You can also email cspcacspsainfo@chenangospca.org.

The Chenango SPCA is located at 6160 County Road 32, in the town of Norwich, 13815.

YMCA gives free memberships to hard-working students

NORWICH – Santa Claus arrived in early December at the Norwich Family YMCA and purchased three Middle School Memberships anonymously to be given to students that could directly benefit from a Y membership. YMCA Executive Director Jamey Mullen, contacted 8th grade Social Studies teacher, Matt Dowling for some assistance. Mr. Dowling worked with ers and administrators to find three students that have been working hard, being good role models, making good choices, and showing signs of character. On Wednesday afternoon, Harley Lockwood and Dominic Smith had a chance to meet Mr. Mullen as he presented their Y memberships to them. Mullen said “That it’s hard work being a student during these troubling times and its even harder being a student trying to do the right thing all the time.” Harley and Dominic were being recognized for their hard work and doing the right things even when no one was watching. Thank you Mr. Dowling and the Norwich Middle School for working with the YMCA on this little project and of course thank you to our Santa Claus who allowed us to recognize two of our three recipients at this time.

Thousands of years ago, humans began using the hollowed-out horns of animals to create sound. Animal horns were later replaced with coiled tubes of metal. Eventually, the horn evolved into the French horn, or horn, a musical instrument known around the world for its soothing and mellow sound.

It is unclear where the name “French horn” came from. Modern versions are based on German designs, and the International Horn Society has recommended since 1971 that they should simply be called “horns.”

Horn players produce sound by buzzing their lips into a cup-shaped mouthpiece.

In the 1700s, interchangeable tubes, called “crooks,” were added to horns. Players would replace one crook with another of a different length, resulting in an overall change of pitch for the entire instrument.

Shortcuts®

Making Music With The French Horn

This edition of Shortcuts is sponsored by Niall Horn.

What kind of horn shouldn't you blow into? A horn-et.

Music flows through me in one direction.

The horn has the widest tonal range of any brass instrument.

Double Take
The double horn is the most common horn found in professional orchestras. It combines two horns of different keys into a single instrument. The F horn side produces deep, warm tones, while the B-flat side produces higher and brighter tones.

Hornucopia
The large flared opening of the horn is called the “bell.” Players can alter the tone by positioning their hand inside the bell using a technique called “hand stopping.”

Valves were added to the horn in the 1800s. Valves allowed the player to produce a much wider range of tones.

Locking Horns
Can you spot all six differences between these two scenes?

GAME ANSWERS: 1. Tongue is missing. 2. Mouthpiece is missing. 3. Eyes are different. 4. Eyebrows are missing. 5. Bell is smaller. 6. Note is missing.

Why did the horn attachment get arrested? It was a crook.

Why did the horn get locked out of the house? It changed its key.

What do you get when you play a horn in a minivan? Cartoons.

The horn is often called one of the most difficult instruments to play.

As early as the 1500s, the horn was used by hunters and soldiers as a means of communication.

If you uncoiled a horn, it would measure about 4 m (13 ft.) in length.
